

Ayrienne Parks is the senior director of policy advocacy at Enterprise, where she leads the organization's tax policy team, covering the Low-Income Housing Tax Credit, New Markets Tax Credit, Neighborhood Homes Investment Act and Opportunity Zones. Ayrienne is also co-chair for the ACTION Campaign, a grassroots coalition of 2,400 organizations advocating to expand and strengthen the Housing Credit, led in coordination with the National Council of State Housing Agencies.

Prior to joining Enterprise, Ayrienne served as the director of policy and public affairs at Rapoza Associates, a public interest lobbying firm specializing in community and economic development. A skilled legislative and communications expert, she previously advocated for labor rights and workforce development for migrant and seasonal farmworkers at the Association of Farmworker Opportunity Programs, served as a public affairs manager at the Curley Company, and coordinated women's specialty media during the 2008 Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, in addition to internships on Capitol Hill and with the Sierra Club's legislative office. Ayrienne holds a bachelor's degree in political science and Spanish from Concordia College in Moorhead, Minnesota.